The two previous aging conferences, organized by Eurasia-Pacific Uninet, were focussing on biochemical, molecular and genetical aspects of aging and diseases, their adequate cure and possible prevention, starting off with understanding the underlying mechanisms, the physiological and pathophysiological changes and approaches to compare and understand health care provisions in developing and developed countries.

In 2010, health itself and its possible expansion are in the focus of interest. Health promotion, the elderly and related topics shall be examined and presented in an interdisciplinary and holistic medical surrounding, leaving space for inter- and transcultural comparison, exchange and learning process.
